Pitching - Part 1

February, 2026

Abstract geometric lines in the top-left corner, consisting of several thin, light brown lines that form a series of nested, angular shapes, some straight and some curved, creating a dynamic, architectural feel.

AGENDA

TELLING A GREAT STORY

PITCHING

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

Three principles:

- Show, Don't Tell
- Move from abstract to specific
- Hook into existing understanding

4 things to think about when we make our story:

- Connecting emotionally
- Creating quality
- Focusing singularly, and
- Making it unique and novel

HELPFUL TIPS

- Do not assume your audience has experienced something, “I’m sure many of you...”
- Combine both Micro & Macro if possible! The best hooks come from the audience's ability to relate to their own experiences, then put the problem into context.
- Show > Tell! Give us pictures, show us an infographic, be animated!
- Talking market and market size? It’s LESS about the numbers, it’s MORE about your strategy and rationale for market entry.
- Talking competition? Who are they, what is their value in the market? How are you different in a meaningful way?
- The Vision: If we got a post credits sequence of you after L2M, what would that look like?

PITCHING — The Competition's Plan

- They're researching everything: the event, the judging panel, the guests, the focus, the room/venue
- They're strategizing: their best approach, the pitch team structure, the flow, the information that must be communicated, the potential questions they'll face
- They're preparing: their best presentation design, their story to be communicated, rehearsing on easy and hard mode, with distractions and hostilities
- They've got the evidence to back up every claim they make
- They've got a clear ask and plan to move things forward with or without the funding
- They're demonstrating their enthusiasm, tenacity, and curiosity for their tech and market

Stories solidify abstract concepts and simplify complex messages.

TYPES OF STORIES

... tell people about yourself

tell a story that features genuine, humanizing struggles, failures, and wins.

... convey values

tell a story that taps into familiar emotions, characters, and situations so that readers can understand how the story applies to their own life.

... foster community or collaboration

tell a story that moves readers to discuss and share your story with others. "Me, too!"

... impart knowledge or educate

tell a story that features a trial-and-error experience, so that readers can learn about a problem and how a solution was discovered and applied

What To Look For

- > What storytelling techniques made the pitch engaging and memorable?
- > How did the presenter build credibility and connect with the audience?
- > What elements of the pitch (e.g., structure, delivery, visuals) made the idea clear and compelling?

QUESTIONS?

A Final Thought From Some Entrepreneurs

So much of entrepreneurship is just problem solving. The thing is, no one will solve problems for you. You really have to get at them for yourself.

That curiosity to solve commercial problems, to be ok going alone, to be driven to take the path less travelled, that's entrepreneurship.
